Illusion is an inconsistency between one's perception and the reality that exists in front of him.

According to experts, the eyes carry a lot of information to the brain, which needs a big effort to process it all.

So, the brain has invented shortcuts to understand what it sees. Shadows, perspective and colors are all clues that the brain uses to make decisions about what it sees.

Thus, illusions are a construction of the brain and not a problem of vision. Essentially, one is not fooled by their eyes but by their mind.

Let the brain travel through our following creations.
